REVIVE

Mastering the Art and Science of Resuscitation

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

REVIVE: Mastering the Art and Science of Resuscitation is the premier interprofessional conference for clinicians who manage cardiac arrest and shock, hosted by the Center for Resuscitation Science at Penn Medicine. Now in its second year, REVIVE delivers a full day of fast-paced, evidence-based lectures from nationally recognized experts, moderated case-based discussions, and immersive afternoon hands-on breakout stations covering refractory ventricular arrhythmias, advanced defibrillation, airway mastery, resuscitative ultrasound, hemodynamic-directed resuscitation, targeted temperature management and post-arrest care, and high-performance team debriefing. The 2027 program builds on an exceptional first year that drew more than 200 attendees from across the country, with 91% rating the faculty as excellent and 95% reporting that the conference would change their clinical practice. New for 2027 are sessions on ECMO and mechanical circulatory support, traumatic and obstetric arrest, and a firsthand account of cardiac arrest. REVIVE is designed for physicians, advanced practice providers, nurses, pharmacists, and prehospital providers across emergency medicine, critical care, and cardiology. The hybrid format extends access globally, and all lecture recordings are made available to registered attendees following the educational activity.

TARGET AUDIENCE

- Physicians, Advanced Practice Providers (APPs), Nurses, members of RRT, EMTs, and Trainees
- Emergency Medicine, Critical Care, Internal Medicine, Prehospital Medicine, and Cardiology
- Those looking to enhance skills, learn best practices, and gain hands-on experience

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon conclusion of this educational activity, the participant will be better able to:

- Apply evidence-based strategies to optimize care before, during, and after cardiac arrest, integrating current AHA guidelines and emerging research.
- Implement targeted temperature management protocols in clinical practice.
- Integrate advanced resuscitation skills including dual sequential and vector change defibrillation, airway management during CPR, resuscitative ultrasound, and hemodynamic-directed resuscitation.
- Recognize indications for ECMO-CPR and MCS; manage cardiac arrest in special populations including pregnancy, pulmonary embolism, and traumatic arrest.
- Lead high-performance resuscitation teams using structured communication, crisis leadership, and systematic debriefing.
- Manage the post cardiac arrest syndrome, including cardiogenic shock, cardiac ischemia, and post-arrest seizures to optimize survival and minimize neurological injury.
- Apply multimodal neuroprognostication frameworks to guide post-arrest care and family communication.
