PROGRAM OVERVIEW & TARGET AUDIENCE

The Annual Penn Neuromuscular Symposium is a comprehensive educational forum designed for neurologists, clinicians, and allied health professionals seeking to advance their expertise in neuromuscular medicine.

This full-day program features:

- Expert-led lectures covering the breadth of neuromuscular disease, including neuropathies, myopathies, motor neuron disease, and neuromuscular junction disorders
- Treatment updates on emerging therapies, newly approved agents, and evolving management strategies
- Interactive case conferences presenting complex, real-world clinical scenarios to sharpen diagnostic reasoning and therapeutic decision-making

Designed to reflect the latest advances in the field, this symposium equips attendees with practical, evidence-based knowledge directly applicable to patient care, making it an essential event for clinicians at every stage of their career.

The Symposium will also explain how to enhance collaboration and knowledge exchange among neurologists and other healthcare professionals taking care of this unique patient population, which will also help facilitate enrollment in exciting clinical trials.

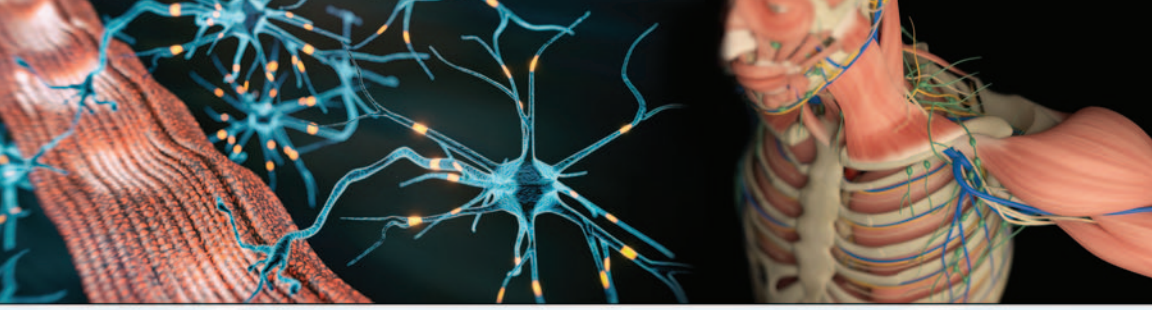

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon conclusion of this educational activity, the participant will be better able to:

- Review novel treatments for spinal muscular atrophy (SMA) and amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), including recently approved therapies and emerging clinical trial data.
- Discuss emerging therapies and evolving standards of care for autoimmune neuropathies.
- Describe recent advances in the diagnosis and treatment of hereditary neuropathies and hATTR amyloidosis.
- Discuss challenging clinical cases to enhance diagnostic reasoning and management strategies in neuromuscular disorders.
- Explain current approaches to the diagnosis and targeted treatment of autoimmune myopathies.
- Evaluate the role and recent advances of gene therapy in the treatment of neuromuscular diseases.
- Describe the evolving treatment landscape for hereditary muscular dystrophies, including newly approved and emerging therapies.
- Describe novel immunotherapies for myasthenia gravis (MG) and Lambert-Eaton Myasthenic Syndrome (LEMS) and their mechanisms of action.
- Interpret antibody testing in Guillain-Barré Syndrome (GBS), CIDP, and autoimmune neuropathies, including clinical pearls and pitfalls.
