CUTTING EDGE

VASCULITIS

Program Overview & Target Audience

Penn Medicine Cutting Edge: Vasculitis is a one-day course featuring internationally renowned faculty who will provide lectures on the state-of-the-art for evaluating and treating multiple forms of vasculitis, including ANCA-associated vasculitis (granulomatosis polyangiitis and microscopic polyangiitis), eosinophilic granulomatosis with polyangiitis, Behçet's disease, cryoglobulinemic vasculitis, central nervous system vasculitis, giant cell arteritis, Takayasu's arteritis, and others. The course will also focus on renal and skin involvement in vasculitis. Each presentation will highlight the latest research advances and provide attendees with a clear understanding of the current standard of care for treatment of these challenging diseases. The course format will also include question and answer sessions and case discussions.

Penn Medicine Cutting Edge: Vasculitis is designed to meet the educational needs for rheumatologists, dermatologists, nephrologists, and other physicians specializing, or with an interest in, the evaluation and management of various forms of vasculitis.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this educational activity, the participant will be better able to:

- Review current standard of care in vasculitis.
- Discuss treatment updates for the management of both large- and small-vessel vasculitis.
- Appropriately use laboratory and non-invasive imaging modalities for diagnosis and management of vasculitis.
- Review the current state of research into new therapies for vasculitis and how such work applies to the routine care of patients with vasculitis.

Hosting Department

Penn Medicine Cutting Edge: Vasculitis is hosted by the Division of Rheumatology at the University of Pennsylvania.
