PROGRAM OVERVIEW & TARGET AUDIENCE

The purpose of this educational activity is to educate relevant care providers on emergency care of cardiac arrest patients, most specifically to teach about post-arrest care, including the use of targeted temperature management, cardiac catheterization, internal cardiac defibrillator (ICD) consideration and advanced ICU care. In addition to scholarly presentations and discussions, a key goal is to help each attendee discover an integrated, multidisciplinary system of both cardiac arrest and post-cardiac arrest care, through hands-on experience with cardiac arrest scenarios and exploration of various protocols currently being used around the country. By the conclusion of the course, each attendee will have a firm grasp of developing and implementing a comprehensive in-hospital high quality post-arrest care resuscitation program.

This conference is designed to meet the educational needs of physicians, advance practice providers, physician assistants, nurses, residents, fellows and students specializing in or with interest in the evaluation and management of targeted temperature management.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this activity, participants should be able to:

- Review the history, evidence and pathophysiology surrounding the use of therapeutic hypothermia in the post-arrest population
- Determine appropriate inclusion and exclusion criteria for post-arrest patients being considered for therapeutic hypothermia
- Implement therapeutic hypothermia as a therapy for post-cardiac arrest patients at their respective institutions
- Create a working post-resuscitation care and hypothermia protocol for their respective institutions
- Develop a “post-cardiac arrest bundle” of care for their organization
- Explain therapeutic hypothermia in the context of a comprehensive resuscitation program to improve cardiac arrest survival, including the use of automatic external defibrillators, CPR quality improvement, and debriefing arrest events
